results in significant downward pressure on price and vast improvements in the quality of services. When supply increases, prices fall, the quantity available to the market increases and the the quality of the service improves.