In addition, 22 percent of respondents said they would be very likely or somewhat likely to visit a new casino outside of Atlantic City, while 76 percent said they would be very unlikely or somewhat unlikely to do so.

The poll, whose results were released Wednesday, was conducted for LIGHT from Sept. 5-8 by the Stockton Polling Institute of the William J. Hughes Center for Public Policy.

ALSO ON NJBIZ:

Princeton once again nation's best college, according to U.S. News rankings

No sign of New Jersey race on new Formula One calendar

$141M residential tower planned for Jersey City waterfront; developer seeking tax abatement

www.NJBIZNJBIZwww.