

Schools, Elections

The New Jersey Senate President spoke about the need to invest in higher education in New Jersey through the 'Building Our Future' Bond Act.

By Anthony Bellano | Email the author | October 25, 2012

Recommend 1 | Tweet 1 | Email | Print | 1 Comment

Sponsored By

Like Send 1,004 people like this.

Related Topics: Ballot

Initiatives, Building Our Future Bond Act, Voting, elections 2012, and steve sweeney

State Senate President Stephen Sweeney (D) called the Building Our Future Bond Act the most important issue.

Richard Stockton College of New Jersey

Sweeney spoke about the need to keep more New Jersey students interested in the science and math fields in the state when they go to college.

According to Sweeney, about 35,000 students leave the state to attend college upon graduating from high school, translating into about a $7 billion loss for New Jersey.

"Once they leave, they stay wherever they're going," Sweeney said. "They don't come back. We're exporting our future."

The bond would allocate $750 million to the state's public research universities as well as public, private and community colleges. It is Public Question #1 on the ballot in the November elections (see the attached .PDF from the League of Women Voters, which analyzes the issue).

Institutions receiving funding would finance 25 percent of the project. The bond is repaid over 25 years.

Some believe that during the current economic decline, the state shouldn't be asked to take on more debt.

"Our last investment in higher education was in 1988," Sweeney said. "Those who believe we can afford any more debt have to recognize our kids are not learning in the best facilities, and that we need to start making investments."

Stockton would apply money from the bond toward its new Unified Science Center. According to college officials, Stockton graduates 18 percent of the total number of science and math graduates throughout the state.

The college can afford to complete two-thirds of the center, and it is being built in such a way that the final third can be added on.

Sweeney, Stockton President Herman J. Saatkamp, Special Assistant to the President Sharon Schulman, William J. Hughes Center for Public Policy Director Daniel J. Douglas, and representatives from the Building Our Future Foundation and the media toured the Pomona Campus, making a stop at the Biology Lab in the college's F-Wing.

According to Saatkamp, the lab was built in the 1970s and has seen no remodeling since.

"This state, unlike every other state, doesn't provide funding for its colleges," Saatkamp said. "All the major universities in the other states provide bonding, but New Jersey doesn't do that, which is why we rank 47th in higher education."

Since Saatkamp became Stockton President 10 years ago, the college has undergone a major transformation, including the addition of a new Student Center, a Johnny Rockets on campus, new facilities for faculty and staff and the acquisition of the Seaview Hotel and Golf Resort.

As a result, enrollment at Stockton College has also increased. This year, the college boasts 8,400 students, including its largest freshman class in history.

"We've done our own bonding to this point to meet our needs, but we've reached a point where we don't want to do anymore bonding" to alleviate the cost to the students on campus, Saatkamp said.

In July, the college increased tuition by 3 percent, meaning an increase of \$1,000 in tuition for some students over the last two years.

"They're doing everything they can," Sweeney said. "But they need labs and they need expansion. They're doing their part, but the state's not doing its part."

The Stockton Student Senate held a "Burritos, Ballots and The Bond" event Tuesday night in which 300 students signed up for absentee ballots, Student Senate President A.J. Vervoort said.

"We educated students on the bond and we also ensured we could make the mail-in voting as easy as possible," Vervoort said. "Mail-in voting is

New Rule in New Jersey

(Nov 2012) Pomona - If you drive in New Jersey
you better read this...

Advertise

Advertise on Patch and reach potential customers in your backyard and beyond. Click