

in an emailed press release June 10.

He said the public continues to be extremely concerned about the environment, but they recognize there's a shared responsibility for the experience.

"One of the top responses was citizens saying we make," Greer said.

The poll also asked people why they attended the event.

*The number one reason was location, followed by the fact that the college is locally and regionally. This helps us understand the importance of the college to the community.