

ãqà 7 • ... Š ‘ ‘ Žq0 7— † %0 ‡ - • ” ‡ f † Žx. • ‡ f - Š ‘ ” ” ‘ ” • ‘ ~ ‡ Žq0 0

BY CARL GOLDEN

NEWJERSEYNEWSROOM.COM

COMMENTARY

For county and municipal officials as well as board of education members reviewing the proposed state budget for fiscal year 2011 must be like flipping through a Stephen King mega-novel, each page bringing new horrors as they struggle to absorb the billion dollar plhave become widespread as local officials scramble to cope with the loss of surcharge, setting up a bitter and protracted confrontation and the possibility of another shutdown of state government by failing to produce a budget by the June 30 deadline.

Democrats argue that the years' worth of relief the tax surcharge revenue provides to school districts will allow sufficient time to see them through this year and take full advantage of state-mandated cost cutting measures in 2011. The argument is bound to have some appeal, even to Republicans who are feeling the pressure from officials and taxpayers in their districts who will hold them accountable for property tax increases.

Christie has adamantly opposed the revival of the surcharge, calling it a tax increase that will further harm an economy in distress. He has also criticized it, with some justification, as an example of the kind of action which merely postpones facing up to problems and allows them to fester.

The Legislature has until the end of June to arrive at a consensus on the budget, three months guaranteed to be one of the most politically charged in recent memory.

Local officials may want to put aside the Stephen King novel they've been handed in favor of something a little more pleasant. Hopefully, it won't turn out to be Hamlet; everyone dies in the end.

Carl Golden served as press secretary to Govs. Kean and Whitman and is a senior contributing analyst with the William J. Hughes Center for Public Policy at Stockton College.

ALSO BY CARL GOLDEN

N.J. Congressmen Frank Pallone and John Adler face tough elections after health care battle

If enacted, Christie's budget will produce a revolutionary transformation in New Jersey

Unsung heroes: Governor's N.J. State Trooper security detail

Pension reforms show Christie has learned art of the possible

Carl Golden: The future of New Jersey's horse racing industry waits for Trenton

Carl Golden: Raising gasoline tax would benefit New Jersey

Carl Golden: So much for Gov. Christie's New Jersey bipartisan express

Carl Golden: Christie's efforts to streamline N.J. government risky but worthwhile ... if done right

Obama's brilliant campaign team has been a liability in office

Carl Golden: Gov. Christie will force cost-cutting culture on all New Jersey governments

Carl Golden: 'Game Change' just the latest book from the campaign trail to cheapen the experience

New Jersey's dismal budget situation requires Christie be a problem solver, and not a finger-pointer

I know one Italian 'Jersey Girl' who couldn't care less about a bunch of 'cafones' at the 'Jersey Shore'

Expect Tiger Woods to emerge stronger, smarter, humbler

Day of reckoning has arrived for both Christie and N.J.

Tiger Woods foolishly following lawyer/agent PR playbook

Sweeney's first act as N.J. Senate President-elect angers same-sex proponents within own party

Carl Golden: Christie must usher in a new era of lowered desires, not lowered expectations for New Jerseyans

If the government can't handle challenge of the H1N1 swine flu, how can it manage health care?

Daggett's poor showing closes book on independents in N.J.

Christie campaign building a bridge where there is no river

Daggett proving to be X-factor in New Jersey's gubernatorial race

Give me my newspapers over MSNBC and FOX any day

Christie's non-message on property taxes may cost him the election

The bitterness will linger in Codey-Sweeney slugfest

Don't expect Corzine's hedge-fund revelation to rise to 'Aha!' status

Republicans must stay out of bitter N.J. Senate fight