Galloway Twp., NJ – On Friday, December 7, 2007, the Holocaust Resource Center at Stockton is hosting a free open house for teachers from 9:30 AM to 5:00 PM. Teachers are encouraged to come at their convenience---during the day or after school. For NJ educators, professional development hours (PDH) will be available.

Educators are invited to explore the educational resource materials available for their classrooms (K –12th grades) to assist in implementing the NJ Holocaust and Genocide Mandate. Free resource materials will be available. Participants will have the opportunity to learn how Holocaust survivors offer a resource for studying the Holocaust. Sample lesson plans and units for grade levels will be available. Subject area files, posters, periodicals, films, and young adult literature will be on display.

Stockton's Holocaust Resource Center is located on the second floor of the library. For questions and additional information, please call Stockton's Holocaust Resource Center at (609) 652-4699 or e-mail gail.rosenthal@stockton.edu.
