GALLOWAY TWP. - Cities all over the country are trying to revitalize downtown areas to attract visitors and residents back to their Main Streets. However, cities also attract the poor and homeless because historically, urban centers have provided services for the most disadvantaged. How do the proponents of redevelopment work with or oppose providers of services to the poor and homeless?

Richard Stockton College of New Jersey will host a panel entitled "Poverty and Homelessness in the Context of Urban Revitalization," on Thursday November 1, at 4:30 in Alton Auditorium to address these issues. The panel discussion is a joint effort among the Noyes Museum of Business Administrator, Atlantic City who also serves as both the Health Officer and Director of the Department of Health and Human Services, Atlantic City; John Emge: Executive Director, United Way of Atlantic County; and Howard Kyle, Chief of Staff for Atlantic County Executive Dennis Levinson. Dr. Ira Harkavy, Associate Vice President and Director, Netter Center for Community Partnerships at the University of Pennsylvania will also take part in the discussions.
